HINTS FOR HOG-KILLING TIME

Plan to butcher at the beginning of a cold spell. To do this it is necessary to study the weather forecast.

The animal should be taken off food twenty-four to thirty-six hours before slaughtering. If this is not done, the blood is forced to the extremities of the body and the animal will not bleed well. The food in the stomach decomposes very rapidly after slaughter and the gases generated may affect the flavor of the meat where the dressing is slow. The animal should have plenty of water up to the time of slaughter, as it will keep the body temperature normal.

The animal must not be excited in any way. And should the animal become heated, it is better that it rest over night before killing. Otherwise there is great risk of the meat spoiling, as the animal will not bleed well.

Do not stun or shoot a hog. The animal will bleed much better if stuck and allowed to walk around. The animal should not suffer near as much if handled in this manner as it does from a misdirected stroke on the head. Bruises of all kind should be avoided.

When the animal is to be placed on its back and held by a helper who places one foot on each side of the body, facing forward and holds front feet second person holds jaw of animal with left hand and inserts knife in center of throat just in front of chest cavity, the point on a line with the root of the tail. The knife is driven in and a side motion is made to sever the blood vessels, and the blood there would interpose with cleaning thoroughly. A barrel usually holds a hog with proper slant with open end against a table or platform. The barrel should be securely fastened to avoid accident. If the water is heated to the boiling point, it is usually cooled down to the temperature of a cold barrel. The best temperature is from 145 degrees to 150 degrees. Care must be taken not to have the water so hot as to get the hair. A small shovel of hardwood ashes, or a lump of lime, will aid materially in removing the scurf from the body.

The hog must be dead before scalding, otherwise the blood vessels of the skin will be cooked and the body will have a reddish tinge. If it is suspected that the water is too hot, the rear end of the hog may be scalded first, as this end is least difficult to clean. The hog should be aired occasionally, but not allowed to cool before scalding. Scalding a cold hog is almost an impossible task, for this reason it is often advisable to complete the scalding of the portion scalded before scalding the other end. If a place is found that is hard to clean, a sack containing a little bran may be placed over this part and hot water poured over it.

After the entrails have been removed and all blood washed off with cold water, and the animal sponged off inside and out, it is often advisable to remove the "leaf fat" and the "tenderloins." This will hasten cooling. The fat should be removed from the intestines before they get cold and put to soak in cold water. This will remove much of the strong odor, but this fat should never be put with the other fat when rendering.

Let the carcass hang where it will cool, but not freeze. It is impossible to cut the meat into shapely pieces while warm and meat will only spoil if cured put on before animal heat is out, as the cure closes the outside pores and will not let the heat out.

Cutting of bone should be made with saw at as low as possible, as ox or cleaver leaves splintered bone, which gets into sausage meat. Ham should be cut through the joint square with the carcass. Remove excess fat for lard and leave ham shapely. Very fat ham may be skinned, removing a part of the fat. The shank should be cut off above the hock joint; this being removed improves the look of the ham, and at the same time the flesh on this is most valuable in sausage.

Called her family to her bedside

Six Years Ago, Thinking She Might Die, Says Texas Lady, But Now She Is a Well, Strong Woman and Praises Cardui For Her Recovery.

Rose City, Tex.—Mrs. Mary Kilman, of this place, says: "After the birth of my little girl, my side commenced to hurt me. I had to go back to bed. We called the doctor. He treated me, but I got no better. I got worse and worse until the misery was unbearable. I was in bed for three months and suffered such agony that I was just drawn up to a knot. I told my husband if he would not save a bottle of Cardui I would try it. I commenced taking it, however, that evening I called my family about me. For I knew I could not last many days unless I had a change for the better. That was six years ago and I am still here and am a well, strong woman, and I owe my life to Cardui. I had only taken half the bottle when I began to feel better. The misery in my side got less. I continued right on taking the Cardui until I had taken three bottles and I did not need any more for I was well and never felt better in my life. I have never had any trouble from that day to this."

Kindness, Cheapest of All. The cheapest of all things is kindness. It is the exercise of the least possible trouble and self-sacrifice. It is the exercise of the least possible trouble and self-sacrifice. It is the exercise of the least possible trouble and self-sacrifice.

Opportunity. Some men seem to expect opportunity to drive up to the door and take them for a joy ride.

Rights of Others. "Zed is very blind, or badly regulated, when it exercises upon the rights of others."—Quoted.

Long-Lived Jews. Jews can boast of an average longer life than any other race. They have always enjoyed remarkable immunity from infectious diseases and typhus.

Shoulder may be trimmed into a shapely piece and parts cut off for use for sausage and lard. The shank should also be removed from the shoulder. In removing bacon from the side it is best to keep the knife against the rib bone, so as to leave bacon smooth. The bacon is best cured in several pieces, as it takes a better cure and is more convenient for home use. If one edge of bacon is thick, it may be reduced by use of mallet, or flat side of hammer.

After meat has chilled thoroughly, each piece should be rubbed with salt and left for twenty-four hours for bloody serum to drain out. Care must be taken not to wash meat from fat or warm meat.

Man's Debt to Reading. "Have you ever rightly considered what the more ability to read means?" once asked James Russell Lowell and elaborated his own question: "That it is the key which admits us to the whole of the world of thought and imagination; that it enables us to see with our eyes and hear with our ears, and listen to the sweetest voices of all time; more than that it annihilates time and space for us."

Beauty resides chiefly in the skin. The care of the skin should therefore form an important part of every woman's toilet.

Combination Cream Jointed nourishes, softens and whitens the skin and protects it against the weather. It is also a perfect base for face powder and it does not grow hard.

Perfumed with the costly new odor of 26 flowers—Jordell. Wonderfully refreshing.
